Project Ready is an industrial sites program formalized by Mississippi Power's economic development department to attract new industries to Southeast Mississippi.

There are two primary objectives of the Mississippi Power Project Ready Program.

- To identify sites that are appropriate for development by companies in different industries.
- To improve the readiness of those sites in the inventory so that they become more marketable to potential prospects.

“Businesses need to make location decisions fast and having sites project ready is a great advantage,” said George County Economic Development Foundation board president Mike Smith. “These companies are looking for sites that are ready to go and this Project Ready certification will let businesses know we are ready for them.”
